

Academic Appeal Policy

Summary

After one calendar year has passed, students can appeal to have specific course grades changed. Students also have the right to appeal to have specific University academic policies set aside. These include but are not limited to specific core course requirements, credit hour requirements, minimum grade requirements and residency requirements.

Purpose

Academic appeal are requests to set aside specific academic requirements or policies associated with a student's progression towards the completion of a degree.

Policy

Students may request that specific University course and/or program requirements be set aside. They may also request changes in course grades that have been assigned for more than one calendar year. All academic appeals are made to the Academic Standards Committee. Procedures for academic appeals can be found in the most recent copy of the Student Handbook.

Related USG Policy

N/A

Last Update

6/28/2018

Responsible Authority

Associate Provost for Judicial Affairs.