Standard One at EPP Level

EPP-Level Data

Standard 1:

Key Assessments for Teaching Fields

What is required for EPP-level assessments?

- 75% of the EPP-level assessments (3 out of 4) must have demonstrated evidence of validity and reliability
 - GACE and edTPA have already had validity and reliability studies conducted

Standard 1:

Key Assessments for Teaching Fields

- Intern Keys is an option
- Professional Behaviors and Dispositions Assessment (PBDA) is an option
- Candidate Dispositions Performance Assessment Rubric is also an option

These assessments have had validity studies conducted. Reliability studies, to ensure reliable administration of users, would need to be conducted each year.

Program Assessment

Standard 1:

Key Assessments for Teaching Fields

What is required for Program-level assessments?

- Each initial teaching field program will have 6 key program assessments.
- 4 of those are the 4 EPP assessments, and 3 out of 4 will have demonstrated validity and reliability.
- Of the 2 additional EPP-created assessments, the EPP should have evidence of moving toward validity and reliability for at least one of them (4 out of 6).

Standard 1:

Key Assessments for Teaching Fields

What is best practice?

For all key assessments used for the purpose of program approval (EPP level [4] and program level [6]), the EPP should provide evidence of working toward demonstrating validity and reliability for each assessment.

Referencing InTASC standards in rubric indicators is one way to demonstrate content validity.

REVIEW THE TIMELINE FOR EPPS WITH REVIEWS

There will be three cycles of edTPA data for all of these reviews (minus any who did not complete the assessment due to COVID-19).

They are not the most recent three years – but they help tell the story.

A LOOK AT INDIVIDUAL REVIEW DATES

FALL 2020-SPRING 2021

In addition to edTPA data, EPPs will provide a plan for continuing with or replacing the edTPA to measure candidates' Instructional Practices.

This plan will include a preliminary timeline.

FALL 2021-SPRING 2022

In addition to edTPA data, EPPs will provide a specific, detailed plan for a new key assessment that will measure candidates' Instructional Practices.

Specific details as to what will be expected in the plan will be provided.

FALL 2022-SPRING 2023

In addition to edTPA data, EPPs will provide one cycle of data for the newly implemented assessment to measure candidates' Instructional Practices.

Plans for continued refinement and any needed work to ensure reliability and validity will also be provided.
