

Psychology

Contract	Term	Course	Contract Title	Contract Description
313013	Spring 2016	PSYC-3235	Learning and Behavior Analysis in the Workplace	For this project, I will be taking five of the learning and behavior analysis principles discussed in class and conducting literature research on how they are applied in the workplace. I will collect evidence from past research studies and through interviews to learn how the field of learning and behavior analysis psychology is being used by industrial/organizational psychologists to improve workplace environments.
319055	Spring 2016	PSYC-3565	Religiosity & Spirituality	Dr. Riser talked to me about the differences in religiosity and spirituality. Religiosity refers to an individual's public and private religious activity, dedication, and belief to a specific religion. On the other hand, spirituality refers to an individual's personal relationship or connection to a higher power for the purpose of discovering meaning or guidance in one's life. Being a religious person, I found this very interesting because I never knew that there was a difference in a person being religious or spiritual, meaning one can be religious but not spiritual, or spiritual but not religious, or low or high in both areas. For this contract, Dr. Riser has agreed to work with me in understanding these differences and how religiosity and spirituality applies to a wide variety of students on the campus of Columbus State University by using a few religiosity and spirituality surveys/scales.