

Contract #	Term	Course	Contract Title	Description
407082	Spring 2019	PSYC 3185	Bullying and its effects on mental health during adolescence and beyond	In this project, I will be conducting research on how bullying affects children's social and mental development. I will be specifically examining if bullying has any lasting effects in the development of interpersonal relationships during childhood and beyond. Although there is much information about how bullying affects children academically, I am interested in learning how it affects their socialization and if the lasting effects of bullying are more significant than most think. To coincide with lecture, I will also include concepts discussed in the social and emotional development of children chapter of our textbook. Based on the information I acquire, I will create a brochure as a way to visually present my findings and do a mini presentation in class. As part of the completion of the brochure, I will distribute it around campus in order to raise awareness.
415082	Spring 2019	PSYC 4275	Decision Making Applied to Computer Security	Though litigation in fraud sentencing has grown harsher since the Sarbanes Oxley Act of 2002, there are still inequalities in prison sentences for fraud versus prison sentences for crimes committed against society. In this contract, we analyze criminal cases of fraud with a focus on employee embezzlement and management fraud proceedings.
417087	Spring 2019	PSYC 3125	Dissociative Identity Disorder and Its Sociocultural Related Factors	The project will be a literature review on dissociative identity disorder and its sociocultural factors. Along with the literature review, my mentor and I will also be discussing our mutual interests on the topic.