

Graduate Registration

Summary

A special advisement and early registration period is held each semester for graduate students. Graduate students also have a late registration and schedule change period.

Purpose

This document describes early registration, late registration, and the schedule change period and tools.

Policy

Early registration

A special advisement and early registration period is held each semester. Before early registration begins, all advisors set aside ample time to be available for academic advisement for the upcoming semester. Students are encouraged to make an appointment each semester to take advantage of this opportunity.

Late registration and schedule change

Students who do not register early may register during late registration prior to the first day of classes. Additionally, students who wish to change their schedules may do so during the late registration and schedule change periods.

Students may register via the web by using CougarNet and the Enrollment Services Tab. Please refer to the Columbus State University Class Schedules page on the Web for specific dates and information regarding early registration, late registration and schedule change.

Related USG Policy

3.8.1 General

Last Update

5/9/17

Responsible Authority

Registrar's Office

